

The Starter Fitness System

A beginner full-body plan that builds strength in just three sessions a week.

You do not need two hours a day or a fancy gym. Three focused sessions a week, done consistently for three months, will change how you look and feel. Here is the exact plan.

How the week works

- Train 3 days a week with a rest day between (e.g. Mon / Wed / Fri).
- Rotate three workouts: Day A, Day B, Day C. Next week, repeat.
- Each session: 5-minute warm-up, the main work, 3-minute cool-down.
- On rest days, aim for a 20–30 minute walk (7–8k steps).

Warm-up (5 minutes, every session)

- 2 minutes light cardio (march, bike, or brisk walk)
- 10 arm circles each direction
- 10 bodyweight squats
- 10 hip swings each leg

The three workouts

Day A

Full body — push focus

- Goblet squat — 3 sets x 10 reps
- Push-ups (or knee push-ups) — 3 x 8–12
- Dumbbell shoulder press — 3 x 10
- Plank — 3 x 30–45 seconds
- Walking or bodyweight lunges — 2 x 10 each leg

Day B

Full body — pull focus

- Romanian deadlift (dumbbell/barbell) — 3 x 10
 - One-arm dumbbell row — 3 x 10 each side
 - Lat pulldown or assisted pull-up — 3 x 10
 - Dumbbell biceps curl — 3 x 12
 - Dead-bug core — 3 x 10 each side

Day C

Full body — legs & core

- Squat (bodyweight or barbell) — 3 x 10
- Glute bridge — 3 x 12
- Step-ups onto a bench — 3 x 10 each leg
- Standing calf raise — 3 x 15
- Hanging or lying leg raise — 3 x 12

How to progress (this is the secret)

PROGRESSIVE OVERLOAD

Each week, try to do a little more than last week — one extra rep, or a slightly heavier weight. When you can complete all sets at the top of the rep range with good form, increase the weight. Small, steady progress is what builds the body.

Cool-down (3 minutes)

- Quad stretch — 30s each leg
- Hamstring stretch — 30s each leg
- Chest/shoulder stretch — 30s each side
- Slow deep breaths to bring your heart rate down

Rest, recovery and results

- Sleep 7–8 hours — muscle is built while you rest, not while you train.
 - Eat enough protein (see the Meal Plan guide).
 - Do not train the same sore muscles two days in a row.
 - Track every session in the SARDAARJI Fitness Log to keep your streak alive.
